MORE ABOUT AN ADMIRABLE WOMAN. ALPHABETICAL The Washington correspondent of the Louis ville Courier-Journal says that "Mrs. West moreland in her sketch of Mrs. General Eston omitted some important facts. The old lady resided so many years in Washington that ever now her name is frequently mentioned. There was much gossip about her during Jackson's administration, and he dissolved his Cabinet because the ladics refused to call upon Mrs. Eaton. We are apt to call these degenerate days, but should our military President of to-day attempt such a role there would be such a howl of virtuous indignation that he would be crushed. Another well-authenticated fact erning Mrs. Eaton and the hero of New s is that one night Mrs. Eaton had the Gen. Jackson heard that such a thing could not be obtained, he had a brick forced from the fireplace in his sitting-room at the White House and applied (I don't know how) to the aching member. In 1858 I met Mrs. Eaton. sening memoer. In 1808 I met alle. Eaton. She was quite in old lady, but was very erect in her carriage, and retained much of her youthful fascinations of manner and conversation. At that time she was tenderly rearing the orphan children of her daughter, Mrs. De the base of the control of the daughter, Mrs. Randolph. Emma Randolph was a bright, precocious girl, of about ten or twelve years of age. Her grandmother employed a young man about twenty years old to give Emma dancing lessons. He was very poor, and the kind-hearted old woman obtained other scholars for him, and gave him the use of her pariors for the class. She went even further, and took him to live in her family. Then occurred one of those unaccountable freaks that the best of men and women sometimes commit. The woman of sixty years of age loved the Italian woman of sixty years of age loved the Italian boy, who was barely twently-one. The vision of wealth overcame his repugnence to the marriage, but Dr. Pyne, of the Episcopal Church, refused to perform what he considered a sacrilegious ceremony, and they found great difficulty in procuring the service of a uninister to aid in the farce. They were finally married in 1857, and she lavished her wealth upon him. No mother ever took greater pride and delight in a son than she in that wretched, evil-disposed young man, for, as the sequel proved, he was base and treacherous. To please him she changed her residence to New York, and indorsed him with her wealth. One fine day a steamer left its dock in New York, and among the passengers was a beautiful girl, seventeen years of age, and an a beautiful girl, seventeen years of age, and ar Italian about twenty-seven. This couple were Emily Randolph and Antonio Buchignani, hus-band and granddaughter of Mrs. Eaton. The villain sent a letter to the heartbroken woman saying he had arranged that ten dollars a week should be allowed her for her board. The de serted old woman thought most of her dis graced granddaughter, and at once entered graced gransitaughter, and at once entered into arrangements for a divorce, provided he immediately married the girl. After a few years of wanderings in Europe, the guilty couple returned to this country, and I have heard that Buchignani kept a restaurant in

COSTLY MARRIAGE GIFTS. A marriage fete recently came off in Hand rer Square, London, which, owing to the mature and number of costly gifts, as well as to the wealth and standing of the contracting parties, created a great stir among the English aristocracy. The bride was Miss Marjoribanks and the bridegroom Mr. Ridley, M. P. The peremony took place in St. George's church, where the rank and fashion of the Metropolis assembled in large numbers to participate in the festivities. After the blessing had been moed on the wedded pair the parents of the bride invited the guests to inspect the bridal presents, which were displayed at their residence. One table was laid out with mag-nificent jewels, comprising, among others, Sir Dudley and Lady Marjoribanks' present, a magnificent tiera with five stars, earrings and adiated star of brilliants of the first water from Mr. and Mrs. Edward Marjoribanks a necklace and pendant, together with bracelets and carrings of diamonds, style Louis XV; from Sir Matthew Ridley, father of the bridegroom, a necklace, carrings and brooch, together with two bracelets set with diamonds and carbuncles, a case of three gem rings, one of a single stone brilliant, another of a mercald surrounded with small brilliant. an emerald surrounded with small brilliants, and a ruby of remarkable color and purity, also surrounded with small brilliants, and a barbuncle and a brilliant ring. On the same table was a spiendid present from the tenantry of Guisachan, consisting of a Scotch gold bracelet, ear-rings and pendants set with pearls, and a Seatch gold connet, or tiara, set with and a Scotch gold coronet, or tiara, set with is, from Sir Dudley's Inverness tradesp There were besides twenty-seven nec eighteen lockets, twenty-four pairs o ts, thirteen lockets, seven tiaras, and fourteen pairs of ear-rings—all of the finest gold and set with pearls, diamonds, rubles, sapphires, turquoise, and coral. Another table was laid out with some exquisite fans several being of marvellous beauty. The largest and principle table was covered with silver, gilt, and other plate of the finest workmanship. Upwards of two hundred gifts were displayed, the donors comprising a large and fashionable circle of aristocratic acquaintances.

THE CURSE OF CHINA. A San Francisco reporter has explored the Chinesque quarter of that city, and gives the llowing description of an opium den : "The bold explorer finds himself in a room ten feet square, fitted up like the steerage of a ship. The half dozen bunks, one above the other, occupy three sides of the dark, filthy apartment and strips of matting form the only covering An apology for a pillow rests at the head of each bunk, and a single blanket is within the reach of the occupant, when he shall need it. The room is feebly lighted with a lamp, and its The room is feebly lighted with a lamp, and its rays do not penetrate far into the Plutonian blackness of even the small room, leaving the forms curled up in the blankets on the shelves indistinct and uncertain. A yellow, skeleton-like human being sits before the table, upon which rests the lamp, and before him are several bone vials, steel wires, and uncouth pipes. The occupation of two men lying upon their sides in one of the bunks reveals the character of the place. A lighted taper burns in a saucer full of oil between them, and one of the men is inserting one of the steel wires, upon the end of which is a dark substance, apparently glutinous in its character, into the fame of the taper, and afterwards through the minute orifice of the bowl of the pipe, at which the other slowly puffs, sending thin blue streams of smoke from his nostrils. The same operation is repeated whenever the supply in operation is repeated whenever the supply in the pipe is exhausted, until the smoker sinks to slumber and reaches that heaven of untold joys, or finds he has reached the antipodes of plysium, where pain racks the frame an chapes of horrible mien burst upon him a THE SIZE OF COUNTRIES.

Anybody that loves the military will get his fill of it in Germany. The huge casernes which mark every city, the prevalence of uniforms, the jingling of spurs and swords in every public room, the drills overly city, the prevalence of unitorms, the jinging of spurs and swords in overly public room, the drilly and parades, the sentinels remind you that you are among the most successful warriors of modern times. The people grumble unceasingly at the inexorable service, but are most proud of its results and the great king who inaugurated it. The three years' discipline, with the opportunity afforded to reduce them to one by previous stady, is an excellent education for most. Many who would go stupid and thoughtless all their days are awakened to a pretty settive sense of existence and its requirements when an inspector gets hold of them. The penalties for any breach of discipline are sure, swift and severe. A rusty button or a spot of mud means repentance in the guard-house, and in consequence you see no such dingy soldeirs as those in France. The men learn not only how to handle arms and ride horseback, but by a system of free gymnastics to use every joint and muscle in the body. The bifluent are undoubtedly selected with some view to size—many of them tremendous fellow—and go to convince you that the old race of giants, who lived here in former times, is not all dead yet.
